

Autocorrelation

- Due to either physical or biological reasons, samples collected in proximity to each other are more similar than expected by chance.
- Environmental/Ecological features
- Genetic structure in plants

Solutions to Autocorrelation

You must first identify the spatial extent of autocorrelation. After that, you can either

- Correct for it statistically, or
- Sample at intervals beyond autocorrelation boundaries